SAVING ANIMALS

Our tuberculosis research is protecting at-risk elephant populations.

At Morris Animal Foundation, we work every day to improve and protect the health of animals through scientific innovation, education and inspiration. We are committed to fighting animal diseases worldwide in species ranging from cats and dogs to horses and alpacas; amphibians and wildcats to anteaters and elephants.

For 70 years, our investment in research has yielded lifesaving vaccines, new treatments for critical diseases, superior screening tests and advanced diagnostic tools.

With every study we fund – more than 2,600 to date – we strive to advance the science of veterinary medicine, honoring the founding principles of Dr. Mark L. Morris Sr. to benefit animals worldwide.

IMPECCABLE SCIENCE

Our Scientific Advisory Boards, comprised of experts from around the world, review every grant to ensure each study is scientifically sound and will advance animal health.

We conduct groundbreaking work in canine infectious diseases, including studies that led to the development of the parvovirus vaccine, saving the lives of thousands of dogs every year.

We tackle health problems in horses including melanoma, foal pneumonia and laminitis. We funded research that identified the causative agent for Potomac horse fever.

We find solutions for serious health problems in cats, such as injection-site sarcoma, feline infectious peritonitis and kidney disease, and we laid the groundwork for the first feline leukemia vaccine.

In addition to comprehensive wildlife health studies, we respond to urgent events affecting wildlife, such as natural disasters and emerging diseases, through our Betty White Wildlife Rapid Response Fund.

A LANDMARK STUDY & MORRIS ANIMAL FOUNDATION FIRST

Golden Retriever Lifetime Study

Launched in 2012, the Golden Retriever Lifetime Study is the first Morris Animal Foundation-funded study conceived, designed and run by the Foundation and its partners. The study examines epidemiology and the long-term effects of nutrition, environment, lifestyle and genetics on health and the development of cancer and other major diseases in dogs.

The Golden Retriever Lifetime Study is the largest prospective study ever undertaken in veterinary medicine, gathering information on 3,000+ golden retrievers throughout their entire lives.

YES! I want to support science that saves the lives of animals around the world!
